Article Summary

In the article, "How Trump Radicalized ICE; A long-running inferiority complex, vast statutory power, a chilling new directive from top-inside America's unfolding immigration tragedy" by (Foer), starts with a story of an immigrant who was living in a village where people were raped, enslaved and it was torched and he found himself in New York City.

Continuing the discussion of the start of the article, the author mentions about the immigrants from Mauritania West Africa where Arabs are ruling, and the refugees living in the country were the black population who speak their languages. The Mauritanian government, because of nationalism, considered the difference, and they tortured, arrested, and expelled black citizens. While Columbus, Ohio, was providing a refugee road by accepting the immigrations but the influx was increased, and judges had to review the immigrant cases, whereas they found many of them as fraud and deported them. The problem was that where to send them while the government of Mauritania has cleared the data of the immigrants and their travel documents and Immigration and Customs Enforcement was not able to identify a place to deport them while Trump's administration is "zero tolerant" towards the immigrations. However, the task given to ICE is to expell undocumented immigrants from US.

Policies made for American immigrants during Trump's era has witnessed a wave, as the ban on Muslims was the very first initiative, while families were separated. Undocumented immigrants were believed to be a threat to the country according to an order signed by Trump, while in a speech by Thomas Homan mentions that, “if someone is living illegally in the country then he has committed a crime and he or should be worried.” There is a fear being created by administration of Trump and ICE while immigrants are threatened to leave the country. The strict policies for immigrations have made it harder to cross the border even though they are living legally; they are deported to other countries.
